

BROWN ON CARSON.

Abe Wandering Colonel talks of the Sagebrush.

"I saw Hank's old stage at Doc Benton's stables last week, and it looks just the same as ever. So does Doc. Hasn't changed a hair. All over Carson the things appeared unchanged. In the Dutch dive they had the same onions and the same cheese; the same good fellows were playing 'freeze-out' for the beer. I was glad to see Johnny Vierra getting rich, but he'll not be really happy, I guess, until he gets old man Yerington's shaving mug in his shop. At Tim Dempsey's the same break-even boys were dealing faro bank and the same old sports were chubbing a check hot and a check cold. The same game of solo was at Brysons & Givevich's and the same keno at Johnny Sweeney's, Governor Roberts and his big hat look as natural as if he had not struck a bonanza at Pine Nut, and Jesse Bright is waiting until the 'white fly' comes before he makes one of his old time plays. I'm told that my old friend Fred Daugberg, has got to be a regular plunger from Pizen Switch. Old One Abe used to say that the chubbies had to bury the high rollers. That reminds me of what Ed Reynolds told about Abe's funeral. It was a good turn-out—nearly a dozen carriages—and that was much more than the deceased ever expected. One of the boys looking along the line, said: 'If One Abe could see this wouldn't he be proud?'"

"I didn't see old Fisher," he said, "but Frank McCullough told me that after doing the season at 'Rubicond' Springs, as he calls them, the old man had gone to San Francisco to engage in the wild whirl of Market and Kearny streets, and be a rival to Miller the masher."

"Frank McCullough is Warden of the State Prison, you know, and runs that institution in a model way. He treats the prisoners so kindly that they don't want to get away. They are fed so well and have so little to do that dyspepsia and gout are the only ailments that trouble them. I have been told by convicts that the Nevada State Prison has the best name of any penitentiary in the Union, and that sometimes old burglars and forgers come to Nevada to do a little work in order that they may be caught, and thus be sure of ending their days in ease and luxury. The penitentiary is a fine sanitarium. Immense natural warm springs supply delightful bathing facilities for the prisoners. These waters are so beneficial that by their application rheumatism and other kindred disorders soon disappear from the system. Aside from the stomachic difficulties before mentioned, the prisoners under Warden McCullough's protection are the healthiest lot of men in the State."

"One of the oddest things about the institution is the State authorities never furnish hats for the prisoners. The consequence is that the cons have to rely on charity for headgear. The majority of these hats come from the State officials, of course, for they are mostly easily reached. Nearly every man in Nevada has a silk hat lining with his name embroidered on it by his wife, sister or sweetheart. That is why, if the inmates should be caught outside the prison they could prove by their hatbands that their names are Colcord, Torreyson, Murphy, Gray, Belknap, Egan, Jones or Poujade and no outside officer, who didn't know them personally, would dare to take them in. A State with a penitentiary like that can't be a very bad place, now, you hear me?"
